

We will keep your information confidential

Anything you tell us is confidential. This means we can't tell anyone what you say or give us—unless you agree.

Sometimes Legal Aid helps more than one person in the same case. We have lots of lawyers. So one of our lawyers may help you, and another Legal Aid lawyer may also help the person you have a dispute with.

Or another lawyer may also help someone else who is connected to your case.

If you accept our help, then you agree to the way we treat your confidential information.

Your lawyer will only have information about you

This means your lawyer won't:

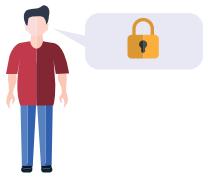

- know anything about the other person
- get information about the other person, and
- share any information about you with the other person's lawyer.

And the other person's lawyer won't know anything about you or your case.

Do you have a question?

If you have any questions about how we treat your confidential information, ask the lawyer before you tell them about your legal problem.

We keep what you tell us private

What you tell us is private.
We can't tell anyone what you say
unless you agree.

We can help more than one person
in the same case.
We have lots of lawyers.

So one of our lawyers can help you.

And a different Legal Aid lawyer can help
the person you have a legal problem with.

Your lawyer will only know things about you.
They won't know anything about the other person.

The other person's lawyer won't know anything about you.

If you say yes to our help you agree to the way we keep things private.
Ask your lawyer if you want to know more about any of this.
