FULL FACTS

On Saturday 12 October 2013, police established a roadside random breath test on the Mitchell High way on the southern approach to Wellington.

At approximately 9:25 pm, the police flagged down a red Toyota Corolla hatchback 375 GHR which was travelling in a northerly direction. The vehicle stopped and Constable Hackett approached the driver's side of the vehicle and indicated to the accused to wind down his window. Constable Hackett observed two people in the vehicle, the accused and a passenger.

Constable Hackett asked the accused if he had consumed any alcohol that evening. The accused replied "I've drunk about four beers". Constable Hackett observed that the accused's eyes were bloodshot.

Constable Hackett requested the accused to produce his driver's licence. After checking the licence details, Constable Hackett administered a breath test on the accused. The reading was .06 grams of alcohol in 210 litres of breath. The accused was placed under arrest and was conveyed to Wellington Police Station where the accused submitted to a breath analysis. The reading was 0.058 grams of alcohol in 210 litres of breath. Constable Hackett gave the accused a print out of the reading.

The road conditions were dry and there was light traffic in both directions.

The accused was charged with Drive with low range Prescribed Concentration of alcohol.

All safeguards of the Law Enforcement (Powers and Responsibilities) Act 2002 were adhered to.

The accused was charged with the matter now before the court.
